SCHOLARSHIP

Program of Research

I study the culture of politics and the politics of culture. Specifically, my research assesses how women's political identities—as candidates, office holders, political spouses, and voters—are rhetorically constructed and contested in popular media. I also examine the connections between gender equity and democratic health.

Journal Editing, Special Issues, and Forums

Quarterly Journal of Speech, Editor, 2020-2022 (volumes 106-108)

Anderson, Karrin Vasby. Forum editor for "Rhetorics of Reproductive Justice and Injustice in the Aftermath of Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization." Quarterly Journal of Speech 108 (4, 2022): 418-445. Forum I developed during my tenure as QJS editor to respond to the Supreme Court's overturning of the Roe v. Wade decision. I commissioned 5 essays from a diverse slate of authors to assess the rhetorical implications of the Dobbs decision, including those for marginalized women and all people with the capacity to become pregnant. Taylor and Francis made the forum temporarily open access for broader circulation.

Anderson, Karrin Vasby. Special issue editor for "The Centennial of (White) Woman Suffrage: Gender and Democratic Engagement at the Intersections." Quarterly Journal of Speech 106 (3, 2020). Special issue of the journal I developed during my tenure as QJS editor to mark the 100th anniversary of the ratification of the 19th Amendment. I commissioned 14 essays from a diverse slate of authors to offer an expanded view of women's democratic engagement, noting especially how the dominant suffrage story erases how many BIPOC both contributed to movements for universal suffrage and were excluded from the vote well after 1920. NCA highlighted the special issue in Communication Currents and Taylor and Francis made the issue temporarily open access for broader circulation.

Anderson, Karrin Vasby. Forum editor for "Forum on the 2016 Presidential Primary: Rhetoric, Identity, and Presidentiality in the Post-Obama Era." Rhetoric & Public Affairs 20 (3, 2017): 489-556. Forum I developed and submitted for peer review which reflects on how rhetorics of presidentiality changed in the aftermath of the election of the first Black U.S. president. The forum pays special attention to discourses of race, white supremacy, gender, patriarchy, and misogyny.

TEACHING AND ADVISING

Teaching Philosophy
I believe that Communication courses should enhance engagement—interpersonal, civic, critical, and cultural. I use communication instruction to equip students for ethical democratic citizenship. I also want students to leave each class with a greater understanding of their choices and options as communicators and with an appreciation of how communication constitutes social and political realities.

Director of the Public Speaking Course (SPCM 200) at Colorado State University, 2000-2010: As the Director of the Public Speaking Course, I oversaw the course content and teaching for SPCM 200, a course which serviced 50-80 sections and 1200-1800 students per semester. I trained incoming graduate teaching assistants and supervised a teaching staff of approximately 35 instructors. I designed and administered the instructor Web page, an extensive, password-protected Website that pools resources from myself and our teaching staff, including the following: course policies, teaching tips, Blackboard quiz database, an archive of class exercises, handouts, transparencies, and PowerPoint slides, and a gradebook template. I designed and updated an SPCM 200 course shell that instructors cloned and customized for use in their classroom. I personally monitored the classroom teaching of new instructors. I managed the administrative details of running the course and was responsible for creating new editions of the Speech Coursebook, a student's handbook that accompanies the textbook. I wrote and helped administer major exams and was available to answer student questions, mediate grade disputes, and manage investigations of academic integrity violations.

Director of Forensics at Colorado State University, 2000-2001.
Intercollegiate Forensics (SP 215) and Public Discussion and Debate (SP 315): As the director of CSU's speech and debate team, I monitored all team business. I supervised a coaching staff and was available to competitors for assistance and coaching. I consulted with the coaching staff on team philosophy, team policy, and the annual travel schedule. I managed the team's annual budget, prepared university travel and expenditure forms, and distributed scholarship money to competitors. I organized campus speaking events and helped plan and run our college tournament.

Lecturer of Speech Communication at Colorado State University, 1998-2000.
Courses:

SP 411	Contemporary Speeches/American Issues
SP 317	Women and Communication
SP 205	Small Group Communication
SP 200	Public Speaking

Associate Instructor of Speech Communication at Indiana University, 1995-1998.
Courses:

S 211	Interpersonal Communication
S 121	Public Speaking

Graduate Teaching Assistant for the following course:

S 205	Introduction to Speech Communication

Graduate Teaching Assistant at Colorado State University, 1993-95.
Courses:

SP 200	Public Speaking

Graduate Teaching Assistant for the following courses:

SP 405	Interpersonal Communication
SP 255	History and Appreciation of Film

Assistant Director of Forensics at Colorado State University, 1993-94.
Intercollegiate Forensics (SP 215): As the assistant director of forensics, I was responsible for coaching competitors in both debate (CEDA and parliamentary) and individual events (limited preparation and platform speaking). I prepared lectures and discussion material for team meetings and supervised individualized work sessions. I helped plan and run our college tournament, as well as other campus debate exhibitions. I traveled with the team to tournaments and served as a tournament judge.

To the Department

Co-Director, Center for Democracy, Art, and Popular Culture, 2025-present

Interim Department Chair, Fall 2021

As Interim Department chair, my regular duties included the following tasks: administrative oversight and approvals; biweekly Council of Chairs meetings; compose the weekly Friday email; manage monthly faculty meetings; respond to human resources concerns and complaints about instructors, faculty, and staff; support and attend departmental events; meet regularly with staff members; meet with visiting donors and alumni; provide input on scheduling; and participate in Commencement. In addition to attending to the regular duties of the position, I completed the following special projects during the Fall 2021 semester:

- Spearheaded our department's strategic planning efforts, developing multiple iterations of a Group Map for collaborative brainstorming and voting, and designing inclusive processes that incorporated the perspectives of CCA faculty, staff, and graduate students, in addition to TTT faculty. Drafted our department's Strategic Plan document.
- Participated in the Academic Master Plan workshop and drafted our department's Academic Master Plan document.
- Wrote a CLA Magazine article that promoted faculty research efforts
- Wrote tenure and promotion letters for T/TT and CCA faculty
- Served as hiring authority for the search to fill our Department Communicator position

Director of Graduate Studies, 2013-2021

As director of graduate studies, my regular duties included the following tasks: Chair the Graduate Committee; serve on the CLA Graduate Council, which meets monthly; review 75-90 applications per year and speak personally with dozens of applicants throughout the year; coordinate recruiting, which includes working with the Graduate Program Support Coordinator to plan our annual recruiting visit and staff recruiting tables at conferences; help develop and update recruiting materials; apply for annual recruiting mini-grants; serve as temporary advisor for all MA and PhD students; consult with the chair on graduate course scheduling; keep graduate curriculum and policies up to date; evaluate student research grant proposals throughout the year; coordinate the graduate awards process; address issues and concerns related to graduate students; have regular meetings with graduate student representatives; offer mentoring for faculty new to graduate advising; supervise the Graduate Program Support Coordinator; teach the Introduction to Graduate Studies pro-seminar; coordinate a graduate alumni panels; and complete a range of special projects each year. In addition to attending to the regular duties of the position, my tenure included the following major accomplishments:

- Wrote the program proposal and curriculum plan for the department's PhD degree; shepherded the proposal through the university's approval process; launched the PhD degree and supervised its first four years in operation; designed all policies and procedures related to the PhD program and comprehensive exam process.
- Supported graduate students during the COVID-19 pandemic and shifted all graduate professionalization and mentoring programs to virtual delivery.
- Designed virtual graduate recruiting efforts during the COVID-19 pandemic.
- Completed assessment of the graduate program as part of the department's program assessment and strategic plan
- Planned workshops and panels for graduate students seeking careers other than full-time teaching and employment in tenure-track faculty positions (e.g., graduate alumni panels, "Humanities at Work" workshop, etc.)
